ACCEPTING THE CHALLENGE - WELCOME TO NORWAY

We are proud to welcome you all to the "Oslo Conference on the Freedom of Religion and Belief." We are proud to invite you to a country where we have come a long way in creating a climate and a culture for humane and peaceful coexistence between the religions. We welcome you to a country where the religious and humanist communities stand together in the struggle to strengthen the freedom of religion and belief. Although religiously speaking Norway is very homogenous country, 88% of the population are members of the Church of Norway, a Lutheran church, it is the Council of Cooperation of Religious and Humanist communities that invites you to four days of hard work in order to build an alliance to promote the reinforcement of the implementation for every human being of their freedom of religion and belief. The Council is a unique host, consisting of Council of Free Churches in Norway, Norwegian Humanist Association, The Jewish Communities in Norway, Islamic Council Norway, The Buddhist Community of Norway, The Bahá’í Community of Norway, Alternative Netwerk, and Council on Ecumenical and International Relations of the Church of Norway. In addition, the Roman Catholic Church Norway, Institute of Human Rights, and Diaconia College Center are co-initiators.

The initiative and vision for this conference arise from this co-operation. But the international networks of our organisations have also encouraged us. This is, in our opinion, how it should be when change are needed. The urgency for change has come from both within and outside ourselves. That is why we are proud to say: We accept the challenge!

But we also feel humble and vulnerable when we invite you to Norway. Norway is a country where our constitutional Fathers when creating Europe’s most advanced constitution 184 years ago, omitted a proposed paragraph securing the freedom of religion for the citizens of the newly independent kingdom of Norway. At the same time they included in the constitution a section saying that “Jews and Jesuits may not enter the Kingdom.”

In the multi-religious Norway of today, there is real disagreement amongst the religious and humanist communities on some crucial issues. On of them is whether the new curriculum for religious education in public schools is a threat to the freedom of religion. We still do not know whether our present unified system of religious education will survive our new religious pluralism. Therefore it is with humility we acknowledge: We accept the challenge. A broader community of Norwegian human rights NGOs is also part of the background and national setting of this conference. In December we will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the UN Universal Declaration on Human Rights with a broad and grassroots-based Human Rights Festival, which will focus specifically on human rights education. Between these “peoples organisations” and more academic human rights institutions on the one hand and Norwegian authorities on the other, there is a close but critical co-operation. This is why we are very happy to express our heartfelt gratitude to the Norwegian government for the role it has taken as the sole sponsor of the Oslo Conference. We therefore nurture a confident hope that they too, during the days of the Conference, will say: We accept the challenge!

PURPOSE
Toleration, understanding and respect for freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief is not growing as rapidly as globalization of science, technology and economics. The result is unacceptable levels of confrontation throughout the world where religion or belief plays a role and is a threat to national and international stability. A solid foundation for stability in world affairs is slowly developing, built on human rights and global fundamental to the development of this foundation. Yet in the panoply of human rights, it may be the most difficult to achieve. The complexity of intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief cannot be overestimated. It is a problem underlying all of human history.

The Oslo Conference on Freedom of Religion or Belief, in celebration of the 50 year anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, recognizes that acceptance of the challenge of building an international coalition to protect universal freedom of religion or belief by achieving real progress and practical support for Article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the 1981 U.N. Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief. The 1981 Declaration is a universal standard around which all beliefs and states can rally, in a common interest to build freedom of religion or belief.

GOAL
International Coalition and Strategic Plan of Action

Create an international coalition and develop a strategic plan of action to fund programs and projects that support Article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the 1981 U.N. Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief.

OBJECTIVES
1. Research, Information Collection, Databases
Develop a strategy for cooperation between the U.N., governments, religions or beliefs, nongovernmental organizations and academic institutions to provide research, information collection and database assistance, as part of the strategic plan of action.

2. Mediation, Negotiation, Conflict Resolution
Develop a strategy for cooperation between the U.N., governments, religions or beliefs and nongovernmental organizations engaged in mediation, negotiation or conflict resolution, where religion or belief plays a role, as part of the strategic plan of action.

3. Toleration, Understanding, Respect
Develop a strategy for cooperation between the U.N., governments, religions or beliefs and nongovernmental organizations and academic institutions to promote tolerance, understanding and respect for freedom of religion or belief, as part of the strategic plan of action.
