What are Human Rights?
Common Myths about Human Rights

- Human Rights are the same as civil rights.
- Human Rights violations occur only in poor, foreign countries.
- Human Rights are only concerned with violations.
- Only adults and lawyers can understand the significance of Human Rights.
- Human Rights are only legal rights.
Human Rights Are:
the rights that someone has simply because he or she is a human being.

- Inalienable/Universal
- Interconnected
- Indivisible
- Both Rights and Responsibilities
What were the precursors to 20th century human rights documents?

What is the Universal Declaration of Human Rights?

Why was it created?

Who drafted it?

When was it adopted and by whom?
The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) was drafted by the UN Commission on Human Rights chaired by, then first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt. The UDHR was adopted by the 56 member nations of the UN General Assembly on December 10, 1948.

December 10th is now celebrated around the world as International Human Rights Day. There are now 188 member states in the United Nations that, upon membership, agreed to educate their citizens about the principles of the UDHR. Most of these countries have incorporated the principles of the UDHR into their constitutions.
Five Primary Categories of Human Rights:

- Civil Rights
- Political Rights
- Economic Rights
- Social Rights
- Cultural Rights
When you expand the civil rights struggle to the level of human rights, you can take the case of the Black man in this country before the nations of the United Nations. You can take it before the General Assembly. You can take Uncle Sam before the World Court. But the only level you can do it on is the level of human rights. Human rights are something that you are born with. Human rights are your God-given rights. Human rights are the rights recognized by all the nations of this earth.

Human Rights Definitions

- Declaration - Document stating agreed upon standards or principles, but which is not legally binding

- Covenant/Convention/Treaty - Legally binding agreement between states

- Ratification - Formal process by which the legislative body of a state confirms a government’s action in signing a treaty

- Reservation - The exceptions that states parties make to a treaty (e.g., provisions within the treaty that the member does not accept)
What is Human Rights Education?
“Where, after all do universal rights begin? In small places, close to home – so close and so small that they cannot be seen on any maps of the world. Yet they are the world of the individual person; the neighborhood he lives in; the school or college he attends; the factory, farm or office where he works. Such are the places where every man, woman, and child seeks equal justice, equal opportunity, equal dignity without discrimination. Unless these rights have meaning there, they have little meaning anywhere. Without concerned citizen action to uphold them close to home, we shall look in vain for progress in the larger world.”

_Eleanor Roosevelt - The Great Question, 1958_
The UN resolution declaring the Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, states:

Human rights education should involve more than the provisions of education and should constitute a comprehensive life-long process by which people at all levels in development and in all strata of society learn respect for the dignity of others and the means and methods of ensuring that respect in all societies.
Education about human rights provides people with information about human rights.
Education for human rights helps people feel the importance of human rights, internalize human rights values and integrate them into the way they live.
Education for human rights also gives people a sense of responsibility for respecting and defending human rights and empowers them, through learned skills, to take appropriate action.
Why Human Rights Education?
Human Rights Education:

- Produces changes in values and attitudes
- Produces changes in behavior
- Produces empowerment for social justice
- Develops attitudes of solidarity across issues and nations
- Develops knowledge and analytical skills
- Produces participatory education
Only 8% of adults and 4% of young people are aware of and can name the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

A large majority of Americans, 83%, feel that the United States should do more to live up to the principles of the UDHR.

2/3 of the people polled (63%) say that the poor are usually discriminated against in our society. Americans also feel that the following are routinely discriminated against: the disabled (61%), the elderly (54%), gays and lesbians (51%), Native Americans (50%), and African Americans (41%).
Does human rights education really work?

How do we move from learning about human rights to action on a personal and community level?
Goals of a Human Rights Learning Community

- Know your human rights
- Value your human rights
- Be inspired to take action toward realizing human rights for yourself and others
Human Rights Learning Community

Inspire  Know  Value
Celebrate  Reflect
Act  Heal  Connect
Where does human rights education fit into our school community and the curriculum?
The School

- Taking your Human Rights Temperature
- Integration of HRE into required courses (e.g. Health, Social Studies, English)
- All school assemblies and activities around December 10th, Int’l Human Rights Day
- Regular focus on human rights issues in the school newspaper and at PTSA meetings
- Educational and activity oriented campaigns around human rights including posters, displays and letter writing opportunities
- Creation of a human rights mural in a central space
The Classroom

- Article 2 - Freedom from discrimination
- Article 19 - Freedom of opinion and information
- Article 25 - Right to an adequate standard of living
The Disciplines

- The Sciences - Physics, Chemistry, Biology, etc.
- The Arts - Visual, Performance, Musical and Literary
- The Social Sciences - History, Philosophy, Psychology, Sociology, Civics and Government, Geography and Economics

Principles for Human Rights Education

- Provide an open-minded examination of human rights concerns.
  - Give opportunities for participants to arrive at positions different from those of the educator.
- Include an international/Global dimension to the human rights theme being examined.
  - How it manifests itself both at home and abroad
- Avoid too much focus on human rights abuses.
- Emphasize human rights as a positive value system and a standard to which everyone is entitled.
- Affirm the belief that the individual can make a difference.
  - Provide examples of individuals who have done so.
Principles for Human Rights Education

- Include an action dimension that provides participants with opportunities to act on their beliefs and understanding.
  - Actions should address problems both at home and elsewhere in the world.

- Link every topic or issue to relevant articles of the UDHR.
  - Make this connection explicit not implicit and assumed.

- Be responsive to concerns related to cultural diversity.
  - Use activities with a variety of perspectives
    - race, culture, gender, religion, cultural/national traditions.

- Be concerned with both content and learning process.
  - If the learning environment does not demonstrate respect for justice and human dignity, difficulties may arise.
Principles for Human Rights Education

- Keep lecturing to a minimum
  - Use participatory methods for learning
    - role playing, discussion, debates, mock trials, games and simulations.

- Connect people’s lived experience directly to abstract concepts and legal documents.
Human Rights is not a subject that can be studied at a distance. Students should not just learn about the Universal Declaration, about racial injustice or about homelessness without also being challenged to think about what it all means for them personally. As human rights educators, we must ask our students and ourselves, “How does this all relate to the way we live our lives?” The answers to this question will tell us much about how effectively we have taught our students.

- David Shiman, “Introduction,” Teaching Human Rights
The End
Education about human rights provides people with information about human rights.
HRE includes learning about

- The inherent dignity of all people and their rights to be treated with respect
- Human rights principles
  - universality, indivisibility and interdependence of human rights
- How human rights promote participation in decision-making and the peaceful resolution of conflicts
- The history and continuing development of human rights
- Regional, national, state, local and international law
  - Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) or the Convention on the Rights of the Child
  - Laws that reinforce international human rights law
HRE includes learning about

- Using human rights law
  - to protect human rights
  - to call violators to account for their actions

- Human rights violations
  - torture, genocide, or violence against women and the social, economic, political, ethnic and gender biases that cause them

- The persons and agencies that are responsible for promoting, protecting and respecting human rights
Education for human rights helps people feel the importance of human rights, internalize human rights values and integrate them into the way they live.
These values and attitudes include:

- “strengthening respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms” (UDHR, Article 30.2)
- nurturing respect for others, self-esteem and hope
- understanding the nature of human dignity and respecting the dignity of others
- empathizing with those whose rights are violated and feeling a sense of solidarity with them
- recognizing that the enjoyment of human rights by all citizens is a precondition to a just and humane society
- perceiving the human rights dimension of civil, social, political, economic and cultural issues and conflicts both within the U.S. and within other countries
- valuing non-violence and believing that cooperation is better than conflict
Education for human rights also gives people a sense of responsibility for respecting and defending human rights and empowers them, through learned skills, to take appropriate action.
These skills include

- Recognizing that human rights may be promoted and defended on an individual, collective and institutional level
- Developing critical understanding of life situations
- Analyzing situations in moral terms
- Realizing that unjust situations can be improved
- Recognizing a personal and societal stake in the defense of human rights
- Analyzing factors that cause human rights violations
- Knowing about and being able to use global, regional, national and local human rights instruments and mechanisms for the protection of human rights
- Strategizing appropriate responses to injustice
- Acting to promote and defend human rights
